An Adventure in 1914 is a memoir written by my great grandfather Thomas Tileston Wells of New York City. Wells, a lawyer, wrote this document after a harrowing journey he took in the summer of 1914 with his wife and two children. He had planned on pleasurable hikes in the Swiss and Austrian Tyrol. Instead he was a witness to history's greatest train wreck - the outbreak of World War I. Wells wrote poignantly about the mobilization of European armies and its effect on the soldier's ...

The typed manuscript was called An Adventure in 1914 and concerned Wells and his family's travels in Europe in the summer of 1914 just as World War I was breaking out. I was fascinated by this period in which the world was radically and violently transformed. In the summer of 2015, I retraced Wells's steps, journeying through Europe by boat and train and taking photographs along the way. In Riva del Garda I stayed in the same hotel that Wells had stayed in over a hundred years before ...
